Nilekani's Challenge: Change: Continuity

India has benefited by a tradeoff between fixed assets (such as roads, railroads and other transport modes) and liquid funds (such as liquidity in the public bond market). This has benefitted the government and companies alike. However, it has also led to high levels of inflation and low levels of economic growth.

The paper exercise in 2021 would have to be more comprehensive and realistic. It would need to take into account the challenges faced by the economy, including the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic. The focus should be on long-term issues, such as the need for infrastructure development and the promotion of small and medium enterprises. Short-term measures should be avoided, as they are likely to have only a limited impact on the economy.

AADHAAR

Do We Really Need the Aadhaar?

Aadhaar, the unique identification number, is a fundamental right for all Indians. It is a tool for the government to ensure the provision of essential services to citizens. However, there are concerns about the use of Aadhaar for commercial purposes and the potential for misuse of personal data.

Making triple talaq illegal is laudatory. But some aspects leading to the verdict are disturbing

However, However, However

Getting Personal in a Public Space

In recent years, there has been a growing awareness of the importance of privacy and data protection. This is due to the increased use of technology and the collection of personal data by governments and companies. However, there is a need for a balance between the protection of personal data and the need for the government to collect data for the provision of essential services.

The saving grace of this missed opportunity is the Constitutional Court's decision in 2013 to strike down the controversial 'Retroactive Marriage Bill.' This decision was a major victory for human rights and a step towards the realization of the rights of same-sex couples. However, there is still a need for further action to ensure the full recognition and protection of same-sex couples in the country.
