The ‘Bois Locker Room’ fracas in Delhi has added another woeful episode to the nightmare that is the heterosexual male’s relationship with women. As we know, there were morphed nude photos of underage female students that were circulated in the chatroom that were outing. Alleged perpetrators were questioned; there is a police investigation underway. Some group members spoke about raping some of their female classmates. Over those messages, they mauled the personalities of the girls. In doing so, they hauled their own selves over the coals as human beings. Once more, Indian maleness gets implicated in the web of women’s violation. Whether they admit to it or not, innocent boys and men are part of a wider gender-violent, misogyny-enabling discourse.

Read more at: https://www.deccanherald.com/opinion/finding-language-for-intimacy-841226.html